

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Hancock County Soil Conservation District has helped fifteen farmers in the county with Conservation planning from January 1, 1962 until July 1, 1962. This adds 1283 acres under plan for this period.

Technicians Hugh Sanford, and Mark Dunnam will assist you in carrying out your conservation program on the farm. Generally, requests can be handled immediately. However, on some requests should be given some advance notice.

If it is not possible for the district to give some planning assistance on roadside erosion control with the individual members of the board of Supervisors. An agreement similar to the one used for farmers is required in processing the plan.

Planning assistance was given to the following Cooperators during the last six months of this year: Larry Rester, Leetown; A. E. Sanders, Picayune; L. W. Mitchell, Flattop; Herbert Knight, Flattop; Dan Williams, Flattop; Jordan

'EYES' FOR FALLOUT SHELTERS

Radiological detection instruments will be a vital component of supplies for community fallout shelters stocked under the Federal shelter program of the Department of Defense.

A nuclear attack might threaten large areas of the nation with radioactive fallout. Some areas could receive a heavy fallout deposit requiring stays in a shelter of two weeks or more, while shelter occupants in lightly-affected areas might begin coming out in a few days or less.

Radiological instruments are needed by occupants of community fallout shelters to tell them when they might emerge safely.

Radiation cannot be detected by the senses. Grouped around the shipping case in the picture of the radiation monitoring kit are: (1) A geiger counter with earphones, batteries and accessories for use in measuring low-range radiation such as might be dangerous in food and water; (2) Three pencil-like dosimeters and a dosimeter charger (square box with two black knobs)—the dosimeters, worn by individuals, indicate total radiation absorbed, while the charger returns dosimeters to zero settings for re-use; and (3) A survey meter for measuring high-level radiation such as might occur outside a fallout shelter.

FORESTRY NOTES

FOREST FIRE WATCH IS HOURLY AFFAIR

Is today a bad day for forest fires, only moderately bad, or just an average day for this season of the year? If you were to ask this question of any area forester or dispatcher employed by the Mississippi Forestry Commission they could tell you, based on information obtained at one of sixty-three (63) fire danger rating stations operated by the Forestry Commission.

Fire danger ratings are reliable because of the careful research and experience applied in developing the system and the accurate information used in the daily computations. Measurements of fuel moisture and wind speed are made at least three times a day—9 a. m., 2 p. m., and 5 p. m.—at each danger station. The amount of rain is measured just once each day. These measurements, combined with season of the year and condition of vegetation, form the basis for rating the day's fire danger. By using a fire danger meter which automatically gives the key factors their proper weight, the operator of a danger station can determine the type of fire day quickly, accurately, and without personal bias. The ratings are expressed in numerical classes having definite meaning and calling for definite action.

Before this system was developed, Mississippi Forestry Commission personnel responsible for controlling fires tried to estimate the day's burning conditions by rough rules of thumb. Wind speed was estimated from the movement of trees or smoke drift. The extent to which a pine needle would bend without breaking or the ease with which hardwood leaves would crush in the hand are examples of various attempts to find some basis for an opinion of burning conditions. These rules were very useful to an experienced man in an area familiar to him.

Today, fire control men have a scientific approach to measuring fire danger. The amount of moisture and wind velocity are measured with instruments. Other important factors are included that were not considered by the old timer. With the present system the report from all stations are comparable for any section of the state.

Fire danger ratings are a useful tool in the job of prevention and control and represent a tremendous advance over the informal and ununiformed methods of guessing at fire danger, common a decade or two ago. The danger ratings determine whether the fire suppression crews are standing by for immediate dispatch to suppress fires or whether they are assigned other duties by the area forester.

Fishing news seems good especially regarding speckle trout and red fish. Reports came in that both reds and speckles are being caught up Jordan River. Those catching the reds said they were using dead bait. The reds were caught in the main river and Bayou La Croix. Green trout have sort of let up and small catches are being reported.

Fishermen here said they have never seen so many small trout being caught. Of course the real sport throws the little ones back. For those who don't know it, it is a good idea to wet the hand before taking off a small trout and being careful not to injure the fish. Let the fish slide gently into the water, don't throw it back. Small fish now means larger ones next year.

Coming over for the long Labor Day weekend will be Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Simpson and family of New Orleans. They will be at their home in Pass Christian and expect to do some fishing and crabbing.

Mr. Jos di Benedetto was up Jordan River after speckles and red fish with Pat Garcia.

Mr. Joe is 91 years old and goes fishing most every day he informed us. Can't understand what's wrong with the fish, said Mr. Joe.

He usually gets his share.

A large number of fight fans were at the Trapani knock-knock Club Tuesday night to greet Ralph Dupas and see films of his recent fight with Griffin. Ralph's next bout will be in London on the 11th of September with the champion of that country. Ralph told us confidentially that when he returns he expects to purchase a lot in Bay St. Louis and later on will build a home here. He said he hinks Bay St. Louis is a swell place. Ralph says he likes salt water fishing which is one of his hobbies.

Ralph was accompanied by Addy Naismith who owns Shoreline Park here and who used to fight at Bay High a few years back.

Dino Carimagno and Louis Vis on made a fishing trip to Ship Island this week. Both told the large sharks and stingrays which infested the waters off the island. They tried to hook a 10 ft. shark but said they wouldn't have known what to do with it if they had hooked it. Better stick to catching smaller fish boys.

Bub and John Genin returned Monday from a vacation to Cross City, Florida. Both agreed that fishing there does not measure up with our fishing hereabouts.

One of our local merchants said that some of his customers asked when do you work? you're always fishing according to the number of times your name appears in this column regarding fishing. Reminds me of the card I received from a friend in New Orleans, which read:

"Since there is six times as much water as dry land on earth, anyone can plainly see the Good

Shrimp boats are reporting some nice catches at this time. The shrimp are running larger and are being caught right out in front of the Bay and along the south end of the sea wall as far as Clermont Harbor, according to Bobby Strong, a commercial fisherman. This is good news. Speckles usually follow the shrimp and fishing from the seawall should improve right along now.

Those who like dove shooting are anxiously awaiting the opening of the split season on doves in September. According to some, doves are beginning to arrive and things look good for some real hunting.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT BEGINS SATURDAY

Mrs. Odile Carier, tennis instructor, announced a tennis tournament will be held beginning at 10 a. m. Saturday, September 1, at City Park, with Brother Dacien serving as judge.

There will be a trophy for the boys contest and one for the girls. There will be two games for adults and one for children, Mrs. Carier added.

She is asking all who played tennis during the summer months to participate in the tournament.

The Hancock County Branch of the University of Southern Mississippi Alumni will entertain local students and prospective students of the University at a buffet supper tonight at the Jaycee home with Mrs. Jeanne Williams as chairman.
